Dear President Obama and Secretary Clinton,

If the president of any nation was in exile and was a resident in your nation. If he had nothing, would you go out of your way, as President and Secretary of State or even as a private individual, to provide for this man's needs?

As both of you do know this is my situation. An upright American of Chinese ancestry, emperor and head of state in exile, finished four years of college and ten years of work as a white-collar professional. Being a loyal American, do I not merit your nation's love?

I was beaten by police and by thugs many times and left for dead. I am now poor, unemployed, homeless, and disabled. Is this the kind of legacy (of your not helping or providing) that you want to leave behind for your nation? The APEC summit is coming up, which you, President Obama, are going to head, host, and attend. Do you now sweep my existence under the rug and pretend that I do not exist? Do you both not care about your nation's reputation as being responsible enough to help a poor person in need?

Sincerely yours,

H.I.M. Yao Sui,

States of America), a humanitarian and
